Physical Description

Morgana stands at 5' 6" with fair skin marked by the occasional beauty spot. The academy's training along with her personal fitness regimen and military NH-31 upgrade program have given her strong, defined muscles, especially evident in her arms and calves. Her jet-black hair is cut into an A-line bob with a fringe and has been dyed with green highlights. Her round eyes are deep green of the boreal evergreens and have a curious sparkle to them.

Personality

Morgana is a resilient, driven, and adaptable individual with a deep sense of patriotism and justice. Her early childhood among the stars, combined with her experiences on Yamatai, have shaped her into a capable, if somewhat introverted leader with a passion for academic growth and exploration. She truly enjoys scientific experimentation and engineering and will often jump into a personal project to manage anxiety, when she does this there is a notable lack of documentation. She views everything through an empirical lens and can be politely stubborn when results don't fit the available models and never shies away from voicing her opinions.

History

Morgana Faelan was born 3日 2月 20 aboard the MKSS Adamant. Morgana's parents were both civilian engineers working for Frontier Industrial Mining. Primarily employed as surveyors, they were also often assigned to site inspection and auditing. Morgana rarely stood on solid earth as a child and very much considers herself a 'spacer', and growing up around heavy industrial equipment gave her an appreciation for machines.

Virtual class rooms sufficed during her primary education, though her parents decided she'd be better served by a terrestrial education for secondary education and was sent to Kyoto on Yamatai. Several factors influenced this, least of which was the on going Second Mishhuvurthyar War. Her first year of secondary was defined by a difficulty to fit in and homesickness as her socialization aboard the various survey ships was non-standard. Rather she threw her self into her academic studies in which, having more hands on experience than most teenagers, she excelled at. During this time she also began learning the violin. Her second year however was defined by the Battle of Yamatai. The prefecture she was residing in was only minimally targeted, none the less a few desks at her school were empty when all was said and done. As traumatic as it was for her entire generation, it did give her a common experience with which she could bond with her peers over.

The BOY was definitely a turning point in Morgana's life. The fear she felt and the image of Nekovalkyrja fighting against the monstrous Mishhuvurthar stoked a patriotic fire in her. Her childhood created a fascination for engineering and science, her teenage years made her want to turn those interests into protecting people and bettering the nation that protected her. After the end of a shaky second year of secondary, she once again excelled in her academic studies.

As soon as she was able she petitioned for Star Army Academy admission into Science Officer's course. Her high school results made her a high priority candidate. Leadership courses made her more confident, erasing her more awkward parts and shaping her into a very well rounded officer candidate. While the course she undertook was rather holistic, she was specifically drawn to Astrophysics.

In the final year of her studies, she joined Princess Aiko in the Liberation of Hanako's World. After graduation she was recommended to apply for the YSS Kaiyo. Inspired by the action of the Kaiyo crew during the operation she petitioned for a position aboard the ship, taking a posting at SARA while awaiting response.
