

Characters

Our shared universe includes thousands of detailed characters to meet. There's over 2993 character pages (about 23% of the the wiki) including both player-made characters (PCs) and non-player characters (NPCs) that are controlled by plot Game Masters (GMs) or Faction Managers (FMs) as needed.

Any player character and any named characters that appear in the roleplay are considered notable and should be included on the wiki so that their information can be used for future appearances and for historical purposes.

On Star Army, we call individuals in the universe characters so they're not confused with the people who play them.

Types of Characters

On Star Army, there are two primary types of characters that appear in the roleplay: player characters (PCs) and non-player characters (NPCs). characters are further divided into one of several character statuses:

- Player Characters (characters: namespace)
  - Active - played currently or recently
  - Inactive - player inactive for 30 days or more
  - Adoptable - flagged as available to adopt
- Non-Player Characters (characters:npc: namespace)
  - In Use - A GM or FM is currently using or reserving this character

- Available - GMs and FMs can post for this character as needed
- On Loan - GM or FM has loaned this character to someone

Player Characters

Player characters (PCs) are the characters whose speech and actions are controlled by players instead of by the GM. They're the "main characters" of the story. Maybe even the heroes. The storyline will follow them.

Role-Players put themselves in the role of player characters characters adventuring in the Star Army universe. Quite simply, a player character (PC) is a character that any player primarily controls in any sort of game setting. Usually, these are the characters you spend the most time developing in a roleplay setting because they are the ones that the story will revolve around.

Non-Player Characters

In contrast, non-player characters (NPCs) are controlled by a plot's Game Master (typical), a faction manager, or the creator of the roleplaying thread. They're are part of the imaginary environment in which the player characters are adventuring. Control of NPCs can be shared in some cases.

Create NPCs articles in the characters:NPC: namespace using the NPC Template. There are Random Generators  for NPCs available.

Non-Player Characters (NPCs) are characters that are part of the imaginary environment that the characters are adventuring in. They are controlled by a plot's Game Master.

Archived Characters

Characters we don't expect to be played or use again may be moved into the Archived Characters namespace, which is hidden to most users. This helps avoid clutter in search results.

Character Creation and Review

For character creation guides, see: Creating a Character

A Game Master is responsible for evaluation and approval of characters made for his/her plot.

1. Be original. No characters from other media such as movie, books, and games.
2. Put your character on the wiki.
3. Use the provided template.
4. Keep the page up to date.

5. Until a character is approved by a Game Master or a Character Approver, the character is limited to the Open RP and Freeform RP forums.
6. Once approved by a GM, a character can join that GM's plot.
7. If you want your character to be related to an existing character, get permission from that character's player first.

Characters can be adopted too. See Character Adoption for details.

Character Directory
