History

Family (or Creators)

Two parents, presumed dead.

Pre-RP

A former citizen of Nepleslia, Jannafette was born into an impoverished community rife with crime. Suckered into a number of debts they could never pay off, Janna's family was inevitably taken into slavery and seperated from one another. The young girl was sold to the government of Qua'Jurein: A lawless, mobile planetoid run by malicious, cephalopod-like creatures. After a few months of experimentation, her mind was transplanted into the body of a Qua'Jurein pest; cat-sized insects that infest areas of the planetoid. A thought-translating voice collar was wired into her skull along with a tracking microchip and kill-switch, and she was released into the slums of the Xylem Sprawl to try and make a living for herself in her current state. Currently, Jannafette has formed an uneasy partnership with an eccentric inventor. The two make money off of Jannafette by building extravagant, woodwind-esque instruments for Janna to play using each of her breathing spiracles.

Skills

Entertainment

A year of being half-freak show, half-musician has given Jannafette a set of simplistic, self-learned skills in improvisation and music. While far from being a professional, Janna still manages to draw a crowd, if only for her unusual body.

Survival and Military

Being a civilian, and a prisoner on top of that, Janna has no military training. However, her years spent wandering the Xylem Sprawl have given her an intimate knowledge of the many mazes of maintenance corridors, crawl-spaces and pipe networks. She knows what places are patrolled by aging security drones, where local gangs have set up shop, and where to find water supplies. She has previously used this knowledge to perform odd jobs like revealing the locations of wells and pest-hives to others.
