History

Heartbreak's history is mostly the same as other women her age who are of the Fyunnen caste. At a young age, she began training for her duty to the Matriarchy, at adolescence she was placed into active military service, and through her adulthood she has continued to serve.

The distinguishing feature of Heartbreak's life was her marriage to one of the few males of the Fyunnen caste in her time which had any sort of diplomatic sway. He was a land owner, a commander, and he had the ear of the head of the Fyunnen caste at that time.

During the course of Heartbreak's marriage and service, Heartbreak's field assignment took her far away from home with her combat unit. During the course of this deployment, Heartbreak found comfort in the arms of one of the fellow officers which she worked with. Their relationship became intimate, and it endured even when the pair returned to their home city.

After some time of being with both her husband and lover, Heartbreak's secret was eventually discovered. The resulting events earned Heartbreak her name, and left her without a lover and without a husband. Since then, Heartbreak has never truly been the same woman. Since the tragic event in her life, Heartbreak's service to the Matriarchy has been the primary feature of her existence, and continues to be her central focus in life.
