History

Azonius was a cloned descendant of a species of the brown bear of unknown origins. His species were genetically changed Great Osmani Drop Bear, whose white fur was made brown instead of white for added camouflage in night raids. There were some in his ‘family’ that still retained the white fur, and all were used to fight others, using their predator instincts to kill the enemies.

Azonius had some successes in battle, he was fierce and savage in his attacks, but his master wanted him better, smarter, so they began uplifting him, and a few other Drop bears that they chose. Thanks to Jack Pine and his family, causing a distraction, Azonius used his new status and helped his family to escape. and after some time that it had taken them to get over their savage natures, they found themselves in the New Dusk Conclave and found work. Azonius got a job with the NDC Department Of Communications where he used his intellect and his newfound speaking ability to rise in ranks until he became the Head of the department, and thus had a seat at the council.

He served his station well and gained friends, it had helped that a member of the royal Pine family was a being whose origins were similar, an animal that had been uplifted.
