History

Pre-RP

Robert Davis was born on Nepleslia, where he lived with his moderately wealthy family—wealthy enough to avoid the violence of the streets. It was in this somewhat sheltered life where Davis learned the seemingly lost art of genteelness. Home schooled within his conservative familial environment, Davis learned to love his homeworld. As soon as he turned 18, he joined the Nepleslian army, focusing on maintaining the peace. Davis would remain with his home world's army after the creation of the Star Empire in YE 01, gaining prestige throughout the years with his loyal service. He left the Nepleslian army in YE 15, focusing on his marriage to his wife, Vivian (betrothed in YE 7). In this time, the couple had their child, John, and lived a relatively comfortable life. Unfortunately, as conflicts grew more heated, Robert Davis was driven to return to service in YE 21, joining the Star Army of Yamatai. In YE 26, Davis' life entered a tragic turn as his wife perished during the chaos leading to the Battle of Nepleslia. Lucky to have survived the apocalyptic battle, yet shattered by the loss of his loved one, Davis resigned from the Star Army and retired to his home, exhausted. Davis was content to live out the rest of his years... until that fateful day when the YSS Destiny rebelled and Nepleslia declared its independence. The fragile, new Nepleslia needed to fill in its gaps in leadership, and the distinguished Robert Davis was called by Emperor Jim Blackman to lead them.

Diplomatic Career (In character RP)

Davis began his work by promoting a doctrine of neutrality for the DIoN (at that time called the Nepleslian Empire). During the precious months allotted to him by the war between the SMX and Yamatai, Davis worked with high-ranking military figures to establish the military, diplomatic and intelligence branches of the Imperium. These efforts resulted in the creation of a Senate, military supplier Nepleslian Arms and Munitions, the IPG, and the precursors to the Star Army of the Democratic Imperium. During this time, the NSS Alliance was launched to much fanfare and was a key moment in establishing the legitimacy of the new government.

On the home front, during YE 28, Davis worked on cleaning up the streets of Nepleslia, through organized operations against the Blacks, a large criminal cartel. It was only after the successful eradication of the group's hierarchy that Davis was able to pass legislation which allowed for the development of efficient public transportation, hospitals and social programs aimed at improving the average Nepleslian citizen's standard of living.

YE 29 was a critical year for the strengthening of the military, which Davis balanced with Nepleslia's stance of neutrality. Tensions were increased with Yamatai and the political landscape became littered with numerous instances of espionage between the two nations.

In early YE 30, Davis worked with the senate and military to reform Nepleslia's government into the now Democratic Imperium of Nepleslia. Military production continued at a steady clip.

Diplomatic tensions came to a head in YE 30 when Davis and then-Empress Katsuko, via SMX Interpreter Melisson, unveiled the truth about the Great Plague of YE 08: PNUgen, not the Elysians, were responsible for the creation of the horrible plague which killed billions of individuals. The aftermath of the revelation came to the front during the First International Relations Conference where Nepleslia demanded, and failed to obtain, the capture of exiled former Emperor Uesu. Davis plays a part in trying to establish peace with Yamatai and the SMX, but negotiations collapse. Neutrality remains the order of the day.

During this year, the Imperium manages to win its war against the Red faction, uniting the members of the nation under one flag. However, resentment between members of their respective factions remains high. Davis tries to extend an olive branch to Red members, but is largely rejected.

Davis' political machinations could only last so long, however. Time ran out in YE 32 after favorable negotiations in the Second International Relations Conference saw Davis almost bring terms of an alliance to Yamatai. It was then that the Imperium's long-term stance of neutrality proved disastrous as the NMX launched a surprise attack on the senate and the Imperium's homeworlds, resulting in the downfall of Rok'Veru and the destruction of the Imperium's governing body.

Davis survived the bombing, but was injured in the attack. When military law was established as a means to prevent the collapse of the Imperium, Davis stepped down as leader and retired to convalesce.

Since then, he has served as a diplomat and adviser and awaits the day if and when Nepleslia should need him once more.
