to protect her from the abnormal amount of radiation on her home planet.

Member of the Jiyuuians cultural subgroup

Personality

A happy and prideful woman who believes in the sanctity of the Nepleslian Empire. She has an okay relationship with her family, though did feel betrayed that after nine blissful years of being an only child her parents seemed to decide it was time to start pumping siblings out on a regular basis.

She isn't a particularly easy woman to anger, but once she has been a vendetta from her is sure to follow. To her friends she is known as the shy one who they were always trying to get to go on more dates, but was never able to find a boy on their colony that she clicked with. The truth was she just liked to know that her friends were happy, and at that point in her life that's all that she wanted.

History

Sora Mysty was born in YE 18 in the colony of Ceri_Station, Slua_Ternary. A colony that was only founded some five years before her birth and lead by her mother, this was the second colony and spaceport built on the still unnamed planet. The crust of her home planet had abnormally high levels of radioactive materials in the soil on all locations servayed on planet requiring all people who were going to stay planet side to receive tattoos consisting of nanomachines that were capable of harnessing the energy of ionizing radiation and transitioning it to harmless visible light. As the years passed the locals of the planet were no longer contented with simply having glowing solid patches instead having increasingly intricate patterns on their bodies. Sora was no different from the others, and has over her life had all manner of images emblazoned across her body, often requesting a change to her patterns for any birthday or other holiday that she could expect a gift for.

It wasn't until she was nearly nine years old when her first sister Luna was born. After her it was like clock until the previous year when her youngest sister was born, that every third year her mother would give birth to a new sibling.

Growing up she would hear stories from her parents and other people about the horrors that had befallen their people, at the hands of the Yamatai. These stories instilled in her a deep loyalty for the Nepleslia Imperium, and was something that she knew she wanted to fight with all her might to make better.

When she joined the Nepleslian Navy she tested into consideration for the Intelligence and Pacification Group. After what felt to her like many close calls where she was on the verge of scrubbing out of the training, and a couple where she was certain she was going to die, Sora finally finished her training.

Now she is a newly pressed IPG member and is waiting for her first assignment.
