Psychological Characteristics

Personality: Cy'jiro is a quiet and thoughtful My'leke, hardly ever responding to things immediately. He is often considered unenthusiastic or even boring, but he simply does not like being spontaneous. This makes him a bit unsuitable for sports generally, even more so for duels. However Cy' is an excellent thinker and have a thirst for knowledge much like the Daur, always admiring their straight forward love for progress.

Due to taking care of Ha'lei so often, he has developed a strong sense of responsibility and what the roles of an older brother are, which was not too popular in his younger years, but is slowly becoming more accepted as the kits begin to grow up. However he still loses his composure when something endangers Ha'lei.

Likes: learning, vegetable stew, Dislikes: Anyone who upsets Ha'lei, being rushed Goals: Getting a job that can move his family out of the winter climates and to the big city.

History

The information below relates to the history of the character.

Pre-RP

Cy'jiro was born in a region with a very cold climate. The city made most of its money through fishing and growing root vegetables to ship to other places. Life was rather uneventful and ordinary. Ba'dio was a fisherman and Eli'kagi would occasionally work at a farm, getting Cy'jiro to help her. Everything changed however when Cy'jiro was eight years old. A Shukaren-Daur family friend had given birth to a child, but the stress of having recently lost her husband with the labor caused her to slip into a coma, so the Tela'kuro took in the child.

The new born was named Ha'lei, and from the start she took a liking to Cy'jiro, and would only stop crying when he was around. The worried Eli'kagi because Ha'lei's mother would recover, and the child would have to return to her. Unfortunately the child's mother never recovered, her condition deteriorated and she passed away quietly after a year in a coma. Ba'dio and Eli'kagi decided to officially adopt the child and bring her truly into the family, the child had already gotten used to them after all.

As part of the process of adoption Ha'lei was given a health inspection where they discovered that the child was hearing impaired. The Tela'kuro still did not hesitate and adopted Ha'lei, even deciding to learn sign language as a family so they could communicate fully with Ha'lei.

Time passed and life went on as normal for the Tela'kuro family. But at the the start of EE002, the family recieved an invitation from She'na Academy for Ha'lei to attend because of her memory and talent for art. Cy'jiro was invited as well, for his not exactly stand out, but still impressive performance in maths, and to help Ha'lei adjust.
