Elza'beth was born to a middle class family in the city of We'mena. Her parents both worked to provide for her and her sister, La'urel. Her father was a doctor working at the local hospital. Her mother worked in a clothing store that specialized in custom pieces.

Her early childhood was uneventful beyond the typical childhood events. Life changed when she started attending school. The small, shy Elza found herself being picked on by other students who saw her as an easy target. This is how she came to meet Dar'tagnan. Dar'tagnan saw himself as her protector. The two of them soon became good friends, with him constantly urging her to try new things. Their families became close and often went on trips together.

By the time she entered l'oshen the two of them were best friends. That is when Elza's life would change drastically. While on a school trip with her mother and class mates an explosion tore through the building they were in. Her mother was killed and El'za was injured. She survived but when she awoke she could not see. Her eyes had been damaged by flying debris. Dar'tagnan visiting Elza every day she was in the hospital and convalescing at home. He read to her and even brought her homework home to help her.

Elza's father was very grateful for Dar's being with Elza during this painful time. He actually encouraged the two of them to spend time together; because he saw how Elza would light up when Dar came over.

Pas' allowed Dar and his mother to help pay for Elza's treatment. While the goggles gave Elza the ability to see, it was limited. She considered it better than the alternative of living without any sight.

While in Jui'ashen, she was unsure when he first suggested that they go through the Rite of Honour. However, she eventually agreed. One of the benefits that she did not expect was the ability to see through his eyes when they linked.
