Character Description

Charalampos Ambrosia, known to her friends as Char, is a six foot, seven inch tall Patrician woman with a sleek, and somewhat hourglass frame; her well maintained body is clearly similar to the ideal for an Elysian. Her chest is probably the largest of her assets, and sticks out as a 31DD cup size. Her hips are more reserved, as they aren't out as much, but do resemble that of a fertile woman, due to her having her son. She has hip length red hair, straight as a board, and beautiful violet eyes that shine through even the darkest of darkness. Her skin is soft, and chalk white. She has the facial features to match her hair and beauty, her skin is flawless with nary a scratch on it. Her eyes are quite broad and rounded, avoiding a Yamataian type of appearance. Her pupils are rather large as well, unlike a majority of peoples eyes having small pupils. It is also worth noticing she has a calm motherly aura about her, and her face is consistently calm...even when angry. Her torso is the longer part of her body, rather than her legs. Her angelic wings are pure white, and reach the adult size of an Elysian Wingspan which is down to their knees.

Char is a calm, and collected individual who knows her way well around war. She has few flaws in her personality, however a few of those flaws extend to a distaste of Plebeians who have refused to exchange bodies, and Caelisolans who believe themselves to be equal to that of a Patrician. She believes strongly in the old ways - that Patricians are superior to both of the lower races, and can be quiet stubborn in that. Despite that, she still believes that the Plebeians and the Caelisolans are people who need to be guided, and so long as the two don't cross her line of dislike, will be motherly with them, caring, and teach them with as much patience as though they were a child. Even in battle she has taken a stance of calm, and kindness, often throwing her enemies for a loop when she looks so gentle even in a giant bloodbath. This works in her favor as nothing really upsets her, there for nothing really hinders her mind.

A few things of note, despite working for the Star Army, she utterly despises all of their emperors and empresses, and expresses extreme hate towards those of the Ketsurui clan, even if she has it really well hidden. Only one of her other race would ever really know that she hated Yamatai with so much hostility.

History and Relationship Notes

Childhood

Char was born at the height of the First Elysian War in YE5. She was in the Heavens when they were shot down, it wound up killing her entire family, and leaving her severely wounded. She was found by an Elysian man looking for survivors by the name of Ulysses Clapicus. The man took her in, and raised her for several years; the girl had the unfortunate luck to unwillingly take part in the Second and Third Elysian Wars. During the Second Elysian war, Ulysses and her lived in Hell after it was taken over by the Elysian Forces.. Here she witnessed the horrors of war as General Ketsurui Yui murdered her kinsmen. Ulysses and her tried to escape, but were cornered by one of the 2nd Army of the Precious Sword, and Ulysses was severely injured against them. In desperation, she picked up Ulysses' weapon, and much to the soldier's surprise, shot her square in the eyes when she moved to deal the final blow to Ulysses.

Char dragged Ulysses out of Hell and all the way to an unmanned area, where more of her people had escaped to. Here, she nursed Ulysses back to health, and waited out the rest of the war, which was unfortunately followed by yet another war. The Third Elysian war was more or less a slaughter, and despite her despair she had to let Ulysses go and fight. To her dismay, Ulysses was killed in the assault on the Star Army, leaving her young, and without a family. Luckily, Ulysses had taught her to survive, and survive she did. When the group of people left for New Elysia, she went with them without a fight, having her heart set on surviving. She never once forgot Yamatai, or what they did to her people, especially Ulysses.

Later Years

Years passed, and on her sixteenth birthday, she applied for a position within the Elysian Celestial Navy. She was promptly sent to boot camp and trained to fight. Here she learned several different forms of combat and techniques to take out her enemies, and help her allies. It wasn't long after she graduated boot camp that the Fourth Elysian War began, and she was called up to do her duty. She was more than happy to - the massacres her people had underwent in the past made her blood thirsty. As such, she was the perfect candidate to take the reins of her own squad. However, first she had to prove herself, and prove herself she did. She took to the field, slaughtering enemies; Neko, Geshrin, it didn't matter to her, just as it didn't matter to them who they killed during the last three wars.

She made quick work of her enemies, and she was noted as such, quickly reaching the rank of Duplicari, earning her own squad. During the battle of Geshrinopolis, she was one of the ones down on the ground destroying her enemies. Accounts say it was during this time that she had the calmest look of serenity on her face. These actions, and the fact she looked after her squad much like a mother, earned her the nickname 'The Mother Of War' amongst her squadmates and her enemies. Eventually, the fourth Elysian war ended with the destruction of Geshrinopolis. The Elysians signed a peace treaty, and eventually, she and her squad were merged, along with the rest of the Celestial Navy, into the Star Army.

Here, the Star Army noted her abilities, and decided that it was best for her to go to officer school. She was more than willing to go, because she wasn't ready to fight for the Star Army just yet, so this was where she left her squadmates, much to her chagrin. She spent the next several years in the academy, where she met another fellow Elysian who was once a member of the ECN himself, named Victus Moranilus. They began talking and got rather close, eventually beginning to date, which lead to them getting married. They consummated the relationship, which then lead to Char giving birth to a child, a daughter, who they named Aphrodite Moranilus. When she graduated, she was placed on the 'Officers List' so to speak, by being one of the best candidates the school had ever had. Despite this, she didn't really feel like going straight into enlisting, so she gained her title and retired for a few more years to raise her daughter Aphrodite, and spend time with her new husband Victus.

It wasn't until YE 37 that she actually decided to go back into the military; with her daughter being twelve, and old enough to be looked after by Victus, she departed and enlisted, where she was assigned to the YSS Anoiktos, which was a freshly commissioned ship. That is where she stayed until present day.

Skill Areas

- Communications: Fluent in Yamataigo, Trade, Seraphim.
- Leadership: Char has always been a natural leader, ever since the beginning of her military career. As she fought, she only became that much better, learning tactics, and how the enemy would think. She makes a dangerous foe for her enemies.
- Fighting: Char has been killing since she was barely old enough to stop wetting the bed. She has consistently practiced, and she grew up in different war-zones trying to survive. As such she developed quite a talent in several forms of martial arts, and many different weapons, her specialty being heavy weapons.
- Knowledge: Through study, and living it, she is extremely knowledgeable in Elysian Laws, History, and Lore. She also studied her enemies as such she is knowledgeable on a decent level on the Mishhuvuthyr and the Yamataians as well, though not on the level of Elysia.
- Domestic: She is a mother, spending 8 years of her life living a life, going to Officer School, and raising her child, she has learned how to handle basic domestic duties.
- Construction: Being part of the reconstruction efforts of the Elysians so many different times, she gained decent knowledge in the act of constructing different things of importance for the Elysians, such as houses and guard towers and the like.
- Medical and Science: This is what she mastered as an officer, she learned how to deal with medical and biological sciences so that she could aid her people when they are injured both on field and off the field in the medical ward. She spent all the years studying this at the Yamataian Officers School, this is easily her best skill tied with Fighting.
