History

Delanna Shanis was born in YE 16.

Delanna lived as Royalty on her homeworld, the world was pretty much completely salt water with a couple of islands dotted around. Her species evolved to live on the island to be safe from predators and had slowly adapted to become the alpha predator because of this.

The species made a large half floating, half on land where they made a great living, they became a more social and happy species. Her family became the leaders of this city, the family were beloved and helped everyone who came to ask for aid.

They helped with any dispute, endangerment and anything that needed them to intervene. This was until the sky ships came down and attacked their planet, the army wasn't prepared for this, their tribal weapons and armour did nothing against the pirates that attacked. The chieftain called everyone into the palace, his children Delanna and Salassa picked up weapons and stood at the door with the remaining forces of the army to protect the civilians.

As Delanna prepared to attract the first person to break down the front, she stood at the front of the army with her sister next to her. They readied their spears, but then Delanna heard something, the people outside were shooting at something. there was yelling in a language that she couldn't understand.

One of the civilian's started shouting about another sky ship that let loose people, the sky ship was fighting the one that came earlier. This news bolstered the troops that were with Delanna, she still was nervous, they didn't know if these were worse people than the ones who came before.

Delanna heard the fighting outside stop, she didn't let go of her readied spear as she looked at the door. She told the people with her to be ready for anything. As she waited there was a knock at the door, no one trying to break it down just knocks, with some unknown shouting.

Delanna went up to the door, she wanted to keep everyone else safe, she commanded the army to protect the civilians if anything happened to her as she unblocked and opened the palace door. In front of her was a giant metal thing with a huge weapon in its hands. She glared and tried to attack, she knew it was futile but she knew that she would die protecting her people.

When the Person didn't attack she stopped and looked at the person, she moved back and barred their path inside the palace. This was until her father put a hand on her shoulder and told her these people seem to have saved them and don't want to kill them. With this she moves back and her, Salassa and the army kneel for the people who saved them.

After everything was deemed safe, the city through a party for their rescuers, at this celebration, they handed the people necklaces of shells and precious stones. When the feast was done, Delanna and Salassa pledged themselves to the rescuers, they wanted to train with these people and learn how to keep their home world safe.

After much working through, they managed to get their desires across and the people accept their offer. On the travels back, the two girls learned enough common to get through conversations. Once in Yamataian space they offered themselves to the army, they trained, learned how to handle their Yamataian weapons, They learnt common and some Yamataian. They weren't fluent in either and messed up a little here and there.

They join the Yamataian Star Army and went in as soldiers. They keep up their work but split apart when they had to change ships, Salassa went around and stayed as a soldier, but Delanna rose through the ranks. She used what her father taught her of leadership and what she learnt from training to help her team and lead the strike squads on missions.
