Physiology

Family: Born to Magnall Demaro (father) and Dana Kasaiyou (mother) in YE 09; Father honorably discharged from Star Army of Yamatai (rank: Shoushou) in YE 08; Dana deceased at age 63 in YE 25

Build and Skin Type: Physically fit; pale skin Eye Color and Facial Features: Silver eyes; Caucasian facial bone structure; thin lip-line; commonly wears a stern expression, probably because he strains his eyes too much when working on his inventions Hair Color: Black hair; buzz-cut (not shaven, but short) Distinguishable Features: When not in uniform, wears black fingerless gloves; wears wristwatch on right wrist, despite being right-handed; hair grows rather slowly, reducing frequency of necessary haircuts

Psychology

Personality

Joey was raised on the standards of Star Army veterans, taught to follow orders quickly and precisely. But, although his father wanted him to grow up a soldier like his predecessors, Joey would rather build a gun than use one. Being so different from his family of soldiers, Joey is naturally somewhat dissident. Still, he knows that following orders is just as important to officers as it is to the enlisted. He exhibits a fast learning curve, quick to pick up a new idea or theory and even more eager to test it. A natural inventor, he has high hopes of putting his creations and innovations to good use as a Star Army technician.

Sexual Orientation

Joey is most definitely of the heterosexual persuasion, but he doesn't base his relationships with women on his primal instincts. He'll make friends with a girl the same way as with a guy (with a few gentle exceptions to details). He puts more interest into a woman's personality and intellect than her looks, although he would never deny that her physiology is certainly a factor. He has a certain partiality to female engineers or women with backgrounds in technology or engineering and would have no trouble attracting them to himself. However, he focuses more on his work than on those women who would like to work on him.

Interests

Likes: Alternative/Techno music; designing, creating new inventions; women with an eye for engineering
Dislikes: Alcoholic drinks; disrespectful people; combat, especially killing Aspirations: To build his own power armor; To prove his worth to his father and the whole Star Army as a great technician; To meet a woman who shares his appreciation for mechanics

Personal History

Joey is the youngest in a line of Yamataian Star Army veteran soldiers. He was trained to be a soldier, but as his fascination with mechanics replaced his interest in being a front-line unit, he became determined to be a technician. When he heard this, his father scolded him, saying that he had “shamed the Demaron bloodline”. All the more headstrong, Joey enlisted in the Star Army as a technician to prove to his father that an engineer was all the more important to the war as the soldiers who fought it.

History in Star Army

Santou Hei

Arrival on YSS Celia

Joey was enlisted as a technician (Rank: Santou Hei), and assigned to the YSS Celia. He was shuttled aboard the Celia while she was in orbit above Yamatai, flown in on the personal transport craft Kindling, piloted by Calen Ferinju (NPC). He was greeted by his CO, Sasaki Sakai (NPC; Officer, Shosa), upon his arrival, who introduced him to the ship. After unloading his gear, he set out to familiarize himself with the halls of his new home.

The Lost Pin

Shortly after leaving his quarters, Joey happened upon a lost rank pin belonging to a Santou Hei. He asked the Celia's AI to look into the matter, but no missing reports had been filed for it. Thus, Joey had to seek out the only other two Santou Hei on board besides himself: Zug Leonhart, who was in the mess hall, and Aoki Orie, who he happened to meet immediately after talking to Megami. Aoki had her rank pin, so the two of them went to the mess hall. There, Leon met Zug Leonhart, who turned out to be a towering troll. Though Zug already had his rank pin on his uniform, he did inform Joey that he had carried a spare pin aboard with him. When Joey checked the back of the pin, he realized that the words 'Property of Zug Leonhart' were scratched there. The Santou Hei promptly returned the pin to its rightful owner, and he stayed to have some food and get to know his comrades.

Cargo Transfer to Freya's Heart

After enjoying a quick meal and a chat with his new friends, Joey was called to duty on his first mission. Joining a team led by Ittou Heisho Tangozulu and supervised by Shosa Itkatsu Kiyoko, Joey boarded the Freya's Heart and aided their crew in the transferring of several dozen crates of cargo onto the ship. The mission was suddenly and abruptly interrupted, though, and Joey and his team returned to the Celia on extremely tense terms, leaving the crew of the Freya's Heart to complete the transfer on their own.

Pirate Attack

After returning to the Celia from the Freya's Heart, Joey and his crewmates were tasked with responding to a report of a pirate-raid-slash-hostage-situation on SAY-designated ships carrying medical supplies. While Branard-Taisho consorted with the pirate leader, Joey and his comrades, led by Ittou Heisho Tangozulu, infiltrated the hijacked vessel, rescued the civilian hostages, and managed to force the pirates to retreat. After securing the vessel, the team returned to the Celia and disarmed, while the medical frigates continued, under escort, to their intended destination.

- NOTE: Joey was awarded a service medal for aiding in the defusing of the hostage event. Upon completing his mission in full, he was promoted to the rank of Ittou Hei.

Present Mission: None

- After his previous mission, Joey was brought back to Yamatai for more focused training in engineering, specializing in power armor construction, maintenance, repair, operation, and troubleshooting. Now that he has completed his training, he is prepared to receive his next major assignment in the Star Army fleet.

Abilities

Engineering

Joey always had a knack with electronics, but as he grew up and learned dexterity, innovation and logic, he took his skill to the extreme. This ability came to fruition at age 17, when he created an extremely detailed 1:64 scale model of the YSS Sakura from scrap metal parts he had collected. Since then, he continues to create new, creative gadgets from random slag metal.

Repair/Maintenance

Joey's inventions did not always work properly, and on occasion, their malfunctions would rebound upon his environment, causing significant damage. After several such incidents, he bought a heavy-duty tool kit and began teaching himself how to use the various tools inside. He learned that he could apply that knowledge he gained when he joined the Star Army.

Technology Operation

Though most of Joey's mechanical creations were inanimate objects, he occasionally created animated inventions. It required complex planning and a brilliant mind to learn how to set up the electronic hardware, but with some practice (mostly of the trial-and-error kind), he learned how to assemble, utilize, and disassemble countless kinds of circuitry. Plus, in doing so, he also learned how to diagnose malfunctions in the electronics and correct them.

Mathematics

Before Joey's mother died, she taught him his general education according to his strengths and weaknesses. With his engineering knowledge, he learned amazingly fast in the area of mathematics, advancing to advanced levels of geometry and algebra at a relatively young age. At the zenith of his schooling is the ability to solve basic calculus equations that some people of his age could not grasp. In this way did he stand out from the other trainees before becoming an enlisted technician.

Communication

Being born to a family of veterans, Joey was forced to endure many long-winded addresses made by his father to the public of his hometown on Yamatai. Although he found them extremely boring, he learned to carefully observe his father's form and delivery, and he eventually learned to speak almost as powerfully and persuasively as him.

Physical

Before Joey set down the path of the technician, his father trained him hard. During his youth, he was subjected more, not to combat practice, but to intensive conditioning, during which one pushes one's self to the utter limit and exceeds it to stretch one's own boundaries. Through these exercises did Joey gain stamina, and he became a quick runner and an even faster swimmer. Constantly using his entire body during each exercise also helped him to understand how to use every muscle he could control; this sense of self became a vital aid for him while training for the Star Army, especially when operating power armor. By using only the muscles necessary to use the controls, he saved himself precious energy during his lessons and endured trials that would otherwise have seemed extremely daunting.

Fighting

Even though he doesn't care much for fighting, Joey knew that he wouldn't be able to avoid it, being in a war and such. His father trained him in the art of man to man combat, not only with his bare hands, but with melee weapons and firearms as well. Though he didn't particularly like it, he gained an average aptitude for firing a gun quickly and accurately, and he learned some standard melee skills. After setting his mind to becoming a technician, these abilities deteriorated somewhat, but after training in the Star Army, he polished his skills and improved upon them. During his lessons, Joey learned to apply some of his footwork and evasion tactics to piloting power armors in combat. It was through this training that he discovered a newfound respect for them.
