Physical Description

Odo is about 5'8", slim build, and pink skin. His eyes are a deep green. He has small scars on his hands and arms, usually from tinkering on machines and cutting himself occasionally. Never too bad but enough to leave a scar here or there. The normal mark of a technician or engineer. His hair is black and short, to military standards.

Personality

Odo is honestly average. There is nothing that marks him out from among any of the other Minkan in the service, which serves him well as a technician for the most part. When he has to fix something he gets in and out with no one really noticing him. When people get to know him though, they find an intelligence in him that he seems to hide. Being new to the service he is trying to keep his head down while he finds his bearings, but this also leads people to overlook him.

He works hard, but he doesn't speak up for himself, or at least he doesn't yet. Time will tell as he becomes more confident and assured in his role.

History

Goda Odo grew up in a normal Yamataian household. From an early age he loved taking things apart and putting them back together. At first he was given toys that could be taken apart. As he grew up he realized he had an affinity for repair machines. He enjoyed the puzzle that a difficult repair would give him, and when he was putting things together he felt at peace and calm.

He never did amazing in school, but he passed and graduated. He knew he wasn't bound for any higher education or lofty career, he sought out a career in the Star Army, getting through boot camp and excelling in the technician/engineer studies, and getting a role in that section.

He is now out and deployed, looking forward to whatever may come his way.
