Distinguishing Features:

Psychological Characteristics

Personality: Growing up alone has left Airo a very shy character. While he can be sociable, he tends to retreat to his work or study, and most interactions to him quickly become field research. Because he spends so much time analyzing people, he often removes himself from any close relationships or friendships. When at a party or major social event, however, he often forgets his scientific mindset almost immediately and sheds his thick shell. This is often to the great surprise of almost anyone who knows him. He keeps his personal areas neat and organized, but is not obsessive about it.

Likes: People with bizarre mental health, sweet food, intellectual people, sleep Dislikes: Meat, recklessness, disorder Goals: To help improve the morale of the crewpersons aboard Yamataian vessels through scientific study.

History

Family (or Creators)

Kagi Mina: Mother (deceased) Kagi Kiro: Father (deceased)

Pre-RP

Airo's parents were both enlisted in the Star Army, and both killed on an away mission when Airo was five. He was raised by two Nekoalkyrja on the planet Yamatai with a handful of other orphans, but never attached himself to any of them. The other orphans were much older than him and he was seen more of an annoyance than a brother. Airo was also hesitant to attach himself to his foster mothers. All he knew of Nekoalkyrja were that they were created to protect the empire by fighting the melee. Airo couldn't trust them initially, and blamed them as a race for not protecting his parents. Eventually he would warm to them, but this early feeling of abandonment was a major factor in shaping his personality. He retreated to study and education to fill the void of his lost family. Airo attended an education academy that allowed university level courses in various areas of science. His favorite subject was his peers, often writing studies of them before he even took a psychology course. One of the advantages to growing up in a Yamataian orphanage was that he was offered to test the new Yamataian body, as long as he agreed to enlist in the military when he was of age to do so. Figuring this would be a good opportunity to apply his research, Airo agreed without a second thought, and eagerly accepted his new upgrade.

Skills

Communication

Not his strongest skill, but Airo is competent in the use of communications tools that he plans to encounter. He can operate a radio and headset, but has no clue how to repair one. He speaks Nepleslian and Yamataian. Airo also has a good understanding of writing up scientific reports and has submitted several to be published and shared with the community. He is also a fine public speaker, having done many presentations of his work in his advanced classes.

Fighting

Perhaps his weakest skill of those he has to learn for acceptance in the Star Army, Airo has had very little experience using his body as a weapon. His only saving grace is his keen ability to gauge an opponent and guess how they will attack.

Technology Operation

He is very skilled with use in computer systems, since he spends many hours researching the latest psychological reports and staying in touch with the scientific community.

Mathematics

Perhaps his greatest shame. He was always seen as the nerdy type and was expected to do well in math, but turned out to be a sadly slow learner in mathematics. He knows how to work the most basic algebraic formulas but forgot most of the more advanced practices shortly after testing.

Medical and Science (Psych Counsel)

He is fairly new at diagnosis and counseling, but his extensive psychological knowledge rarely fails him. Airo needs to improve his social skills to get others to open up easier, but beyond that he is a capable counselor.

Humanities (Philosophy) (Psychology)

Airo decided to learn philosophy for fun to better understand the mind and how people think. He can recall most popular philosophers, but he only took the most basic level philosophy classes offered.

Naturally curious to the workings of the mind, and extensively studying this particular field from youth, he has essentially dedicated his life to the progression of the field of psychology. Airo was a star pupil in the psych program at his academy and breezed through even the most rigorous courses. Upon enlisting in the Star Army he has decided to use his skills to counsel and diagnose those engaged in war, as well as study the effects of war on the mind.

Biology

Airo has a good understanding of biological functions, with a specialty in the areas of the brain. He is beginning to study how various compounds can affect (and improve) a person's mental state. He acquired this knowledge at his academy.
