Physical Description

He is a slightly lighter shade of brown with black curly hair that is kept with the sides and back faded. The top of his hair always kept somewhere between 2.5 to 3 inches. He has sharp nordic facial features, a relatively strong jaw, and high cheek bones. His eye color is a dark brown, though looks just pure black in most lighting situations. He stands at about 5'7" and weighed 170. His muscles larger and more defined, though this was just due to his Minkan body.

Personality

Knorr is a strong willed, ambitious, go getter who is always determined to reach his goals. This can also be negatives as he can be hard headed and stubborn, similar to a donkey. He is very analytical in his decision making, thinking of possible outcomes and figuring which is more ideal for him. As he is very logical, it can be hard for him to empathize with people. He struggles somewhat with large groups of people, though it has gotten better since joining the rangers. In smaller groups however, he is just fine and can even flourish. Knorr has always been very confident, which just boosted after he joined the rangers. Overall, he is easy to get along with, though his humour especially can take an acquired taste. The biggest driving factor in his life right now is to rank among the best soldiers in the Empire. Aside from that, there is always the coveted officers cap that any new recruit would aspire too.

History

Knorr was born on Planet Yamatai as a Geshrin in the YE 20. Both of his parents were scientists before the creation of SSS. Once it was created, they made a sort of lateral move that eventually became a promotion for them. They obtained an upper mid level pay grade within the organization, so they were better off than most other families. Because of this, Knorr and his family transitioned to Minkans early on in his life. Their parenting mostly revolved around the education Knorr received. They dreamed of him going down in history as one of the planet's greatest scholars. As a young child, Knorr was kept away from most trends, his parents making sure he didn't grow a dependency on outside stimuli. Due in part to their guidance, and Knorr's own ability, he quickly proved himself to be smarter than most other kids. This trend followed him all throughout school, always ranking high among his classmates. As he was nearing his end of secondary school, he was aiming to attend the main university on the planet. One day, he had left to attend a sort of orientation for potential students.

Once on campus however he ran into a couple of recruiters from the Star Army. The charismatic soldiers managed to rope Knorr into a conversation about the history and benefits of joining the Star Army. At first, Knorr wasn't interested and made clear he was too young to enlist. The recruiters continued, maybe they just felt the need to educate a young person on the Star Army, or maybe they had to meet some sort of quota. Whatever the reason, they went on long enough to mention being a ranger.

Before this point, Knorr had never thought about joining the Star Army, especially as a ranger. Something about the prospect just clicked with him however. After his conversation with the recruiters, he never made it to that orientation. Instead he went home to research everything about the infantry and the Star Army. He decided to bring the idea to his parents who initially didn't support it. After a very long discussion, they only agreed with the idea after a stipulation was created. Jason had to leave the Star Army after three years if he didn't pass ranger school. He agreed, and soon after he put in his paperwork to the recruiters.

Following his 20th birthday, and graduation from high school, he met with the same recruiters from months before to enlist. He was sent off to Basic within the month. At first, he found it sort of jarring, as it was completely different from his home life. After the first two weeks, he adjusted to the life and made his aspiration clear. During this time, he transitioned into a military issue Minkan that made it easier to perform his duties. Ranger school was one of the hardest occupations to break into and only the best were selected. Fortunately, Jason found himself in ranger school after Basic, proving to be one of the best recruits. Every day he woke up, it was like a living in a dream.
