Yoroko joined to military in order to receive her Yamataian body. She has no qualms about the job because it has the potential to allow her to make a lot of friends.

She enjoys Talking, Martial Arts, Rice, Sweet food. She dislikes bigotry and confrontation. Her since having obtained a command position has since changed, to commanding her own star ship one day.

History

Mizuno Yoroko was born in YE 22.

Yoroko was first created as a Neko that was a maid in a nobles house. After 8 years of servitude she was allowed to be transplanted into a Yamataian body if she joined the Star Army of Yamatai. Yoroko joined the Star Army of Yamatai in YE29. She was killed in YE 33 during the Battle of the Lost Fleet on the YSS Miharu, but her YE 29-era Soul remains on file with the Star Army.

Fort Ready

Class 1

Yoroko received accelerated training at Fort Ready I and was part of Class 1. While at Ft. Ready Yoroko met and became friends with Kai Nakamura and Tsukade Yuril during an power armor training exercise. The exercise was successfully completed by the small team. The next day was a vacation of sorts. Recruits were allowed to go into the nearby city and do whatever they wanted. Yoroko purchased a white summer dress and some black sandals to go with it. Afterwards she headed to various other places and eventually ended up at the beach with Kai and Yuril. While at the beach the Mishhu attacked the Fort, a bus pulled up and the recruits were shuttled back to the base.

Meeting Class 2

Once they had returned they were told to participate with Class 2 in a power armor training session. During the session, a few misshu made it back to the base forcing the two classes to cut it short and move to assist what base personnel were available. When they arrived the group saw a misshu impale a neko on it's tentacles. The group sprang into action, freed the neko from the Misshu and killed it's attacker as well as a few of his friends. By the time the instructors had returned, there was one misshu left, the instructors finished it off.

Aftermath

Once the area was secure the recruits were sent back to the barracks in jeeps. On the way back there was a heated discussion during which Noboru made a racist comment toward Nekoalkyrjas, it wasn't taken lightly. The next morning the recruits went through their usual activities before being given a break. During that time Yoroko took Noboru out to spar privately. Yoroko kicked Noboru a little too strongly, knocking the wind out of the Yamataian and breaking his glasses (they fell off his face). After a few tears and a short conversation between the two Yoroko helped Noboru to his feet and took him to the medical area where he received a short treatment in a hemosynth tank. Later that day Noboru confessed that he liked Yoroko. At the time Yoroko was unprepared for such a commitment, and asked to take it slow. Later that day the recruits graduated, Yoroko's first step toward her freedom.

YSS Miharuru

Mission 2

Note1) After completing Ft. Ready Yoroko was assigned to the YSS Miharuru. Yoroko went to Gemini Star Fortress to await transfer to the Miharuru. While there Yoroko met several new people as well as a few friends from Ft. Ready. After everyone seemed to have arrived the group was put aboard a shuttle-craft and transferred to the Miharuru where they were given a tour of the ship, introduced to the rest of the crew, and given a briefing on the next mission. The crew started searching for the probes, after around 2 weeks of searching they found one of Eve's strongholds, unfortunately the Miharuru wasn't equipped to assault it so they rendezvoused with the YSS Pelican, an Anri class deep space repair vessel, for repairs. Once docked the crew received a news update that shocked some of the crew. The Ketsurui had given up the throne to the Motoyoshi. Although the news was already weeks old, to the crew it was still fresh. Later that night the crew threw a party for Miyoko and Yukari, since it was their birthday. As the crew enjoyed the evening, a news announcement came through. The 5th Expeditionary Fleet had withdrawn from Yamatai. This hit Yoroko in a particularly hard way, as Noboru had been a member of the 5th XF. Later the party was attempted to be resurrected, with partial success, gifts were given, and Yoroko went to bed intoxicated.

In Orbit of Yamatai

While docked with the Pelican for repairs the Miharuru was transported back to Yamatai for a meeting among the high ranking members of the Ketsurui Clan. Although the meeting was eventually conducted remotely via holograms in the rec room, the crew had by that point arrived at Yamatai. Yoroko awoke with a nasty hangover from the night before, and proceeded to the med-bay to get a pill for it. After that was taken care of Yoroko went to bathe in the baths.

Death, Revival, and the Present

Yoroko died heroically serving on the Miharuru and her name is listed on the Miharuru Shrine. Mizuno

Yoroko's mental back up was retrieved by the Miharu Clan during the Fortuna mission. The Miharu clan had her revived after a time , along with the others who had died with her. Yoroko was revived just prior the attack on Amaya's Gate .

The Trauma of being dead for over two years saw the newly resurrected Yoroko's have something of a personality change. She desired to prove her self worthy of her existence and opted to reenlist into Officer Training School. Yoroko never showed the leadership qualities under her previous commander to rise above the base enlisted rank in the Star Army. The quiet and non-confrontational Yoroko seeing her initial death as a motivator decided to prove her self wrong. She spent time as a Jôtô Hei But when her contract was completed she got a recommendation from Ketsurui Kotori in the Star Army Academy of Military & Medical Sciences. A former Infantry soldier, Yoroko did give the time in school everything she had. Unfortunately her nature...and the judgment of her former superiors saw the hopeful Yoroko complete officer training on the lower end of the spectrum. Yoroko is back into service currently as a Shoi....
