History

Pre-RP

When he was young, his mother disappeared and he was left with just his father to care for him. His father had never seemed very impressed or even happy that he was there so he strove to keep everyone happy. He hated his home life because his father never really acknowledged that he was even alive, except for when he found any reason to beat him. He always wanted to have a good time and so always tried to be the fun guy in the group. He never ate much snack food when he was younger because he never had the money, seeing as he grew up in the slums of the city. When he got older, however, he fell in love with all the stuff and couldn't get enough of it. His home life also demanded that he be neat and orderly because of his father and the beatings he gave. This carried on into his life and made him the neat and tidy person he is today. Through his whole life he has had to deal with his father beating him, being made fun of because he didn't have a mother, and because he was always bigger than everyone else. This all built up inside him until it unleashed in a violent storm of anger and frustration. From that point on he would take no bull from anybody, and he wouldn't allow anyone to mess with him anymore because he was finally fed up with it all. He also realized through this that he could help protect others from the same persecution he was put through. He promised to protect the weak from the strong but bad-intentioned wills of others.
