Social Struggles

some topics remain highly controversial and represent larger encompassing issues in their society.

Where are you from before?

The topic of the people of Tsenlan coming from another universe is not discussed in the presence of outsiders, save for the few in the Star Army of Yamatai who have the required clearance. When asked about their previous home, people will often reply to the inquiry by merely stating that their ancestral home is far away. It is actually illegal to discuss openly and can lead to criminal charges and detainment through a restricted court or transfer to the authority of the Star Army of Yamatai.

Loss of Sovereignty

Some Tsenlanese find the topic of their people's loss of sovereignty and their place as a state of another nation sensitive. Often times these conversations will highlight the compassion of the Yamatai Star Empire and will focus on the benefits the arrangement has created over any drawbacks. The Norians tend to be a very proud people so over-compensating may happen when justifying topics related to this one. Overall though they are pleased with the arrangement and take refuge in the maintenance of the Tsenlan State Quorum as their local government.

Technological Responsibility

Technological development is a bit of a hot topic in Tsenlan. Having been a time when they were at a very high technological plateau and the dangerous results of it often bring additional oversight to the development of some technologies. Anything related to the siphon of dimensional energies and plasmas usually creates a certain higher degree of caution into play after the result of their use of Asune Energy and the catastrophe of the Void Wars. Individuals may seem a little hesitant to believe that Aether is safe, maybe requesting lodging away from aether power sources when possible. Most, however, will do their duties without the fuss trusting in the Star Army of Yamatai.

Any rouge development of Asune Energy technology is strictly prohibited by the Tsenlan State Quorum.

Former Practices of Xenophobia and Slavery

The reformation of the Tsenlanese Religion in YE 44 was very recent. There are some within Tsenlan who may cling to the ideals of  xenophobia and enslavement of other species and use of racist language such as Cli'cha ¹⁾. In general though most have readily accepted the reformations with open arms and support.
