

Helio'namashe

Helio'namashe is a synthetic material that is made by combining 🌐 kevlar, purified spider silk, and 🌐 Titanium. The material gets its strength and protection from the Nasu'ase, its flexibility from the purified spider silk, and additional protective properties from the kevlar, which are all woven together into a light-weight, strong, and protective cloth that can be easily made into different types of clothing or used as a part of body armor and full-body suits. Its applications are not just in the military - it's also used by rescue personnel and athletes, the latter of which benefits from its mitigation to impacts.

Because of the materials used in its creation, however, it's very expensive and is thus considered a luxury material for the average citizen and an essential for the Shukara Volunteer Navy.
