History

On the shores of the older Tokyo, Pagoda beach was really popular in the YE 30s for citizens of the failed nation of the United Outer Colonies. Several high-rise 🏢Pagoda-style residential skyscrapers were built along the beachfront. The natural sandy quartz beach stretches nearly the entire length of the 60th District and is a magnet for residents and tourists. In YE 42, during the Yugumo Corporation's heavy investment into the city of Tokyo, Pagoda Beach received a facelift. The residential buildings were renovated and updated, raised piers were built to attract civilian traffic with restaurants and gift shops. Small 🍹Tiki-Style Bars popped up on the beach which made the destination even more popular for people.

In YE 44, Taisho Ketsurui-Motoyoshi Katsuko and her niece Motoyoshi-Igarashi Yue spent some shoreleave time on the beach.¹⁾

Description

Pagoda Beach is a beautiful quartz sand public beach that runs nearly the entire length of the 60th District of Tokyo on the Motoyoshi Channel. It got its name because of the towering Pagoda-style highrises that line the boulevard which follows the path of the beach. It is a hot spot for tourists featuring three spread-out raised piers with restaurants and gift shops. Due to the beautiful tropical weather of Jiyuu III there is generally beach umbrellas, beach balls, beach chairs, and people on the beach at all hours of the day. Some thatch palm roofed Tiki-Style Bars have popped up along the beach to provide refreshments and snacks to help keep the party going.

The Pagoda-style high rises are Condominium buildings maintained and operated by the Yugumo Corporation. Units range in price depending on the level of updates, styles, and options chosen from about 66,000KS to 73,000KS.²⁾ Motoyoshi-Igarashi Yue is the contact for real estate purchases in this area.

The beaches have scattered Tokyo Coconut Palms, and the dunes have lush growths of Jiyuuian Beach Reeds on the beach facing slopes as well as pretty Beach Roses.
