

Organic Nature

The newer Elysian designed ships utilize a new method of construction based around their ships being primarily organic in nature, rather than mechanical, though they are supplemented by various inorganic components. Flowing throughout the organism are various 'veins' carrying sustaining fluid, although this is also simply passed through the cells themselves. This sustains everything in the ship, but is naturally extremely resistant to tampering with, due to the damage that could be dealt. Given that it is organic life support is simply part of its makeup, built in to the walls of the ship, and the organic computer is really the 'brain' of the organism. The ship can easily create objects out of itself, its cellular matter taking on the properties of whatever substance is required, including food, furniture, or even creating new rooms in the ship. The ship regenerates quite rapidly, sealing off damaged areas and simply growing back the areas that have been damaged or destroyed.
