Character Description

- Madry's physical design was based upon a Nepleslian woman and she has a small, slender human form. She weighs 72kg (158lbs) and stands at 175cm (5ft 9in) tall, although her endoskeleton and Yarvex Foam body allow her to adjust her height by up to 15cm (6in) in either direction. Her skin is a light dusky brown, almost olive and is smooth and defect free. She has a rounded face, with a strong nose and thin, bow-shaped lips. Madry has a mane of dark brown hair that sweeps back from her face and falls to her mid-back. Her almond-shaped eyes are dark brown, with flecks of gold throughout the iris. Madry's measurements are 38-24-36 and she takes a 34D bra.
- With her origins as a semi-sentient AI, it should be no surprise that Madry doesn't quite come across as a regular human. She is highly logical, methodical and exacting with her approach. Madry particularly struggles with the concept of 'winging it' and is trying to become 'more normal' over time with help from her friends. She enjoys structured environments, but becomes uncomfortable when confronted with too much chaos. Although young, Madry is not particularly innocent, but rather 'flat' as she is still in the process of learning what she enjoys, likes or dislikes as an individual.

- When distracted, Madry has a habit of crossing her arms under her bust and tapping the fingers of her right hand on her left elbow.

History and Relationship Notes

- Jamila was manufactured as a KAIMON/Ascendant Companion by the Yugumo Corporation in YE 44. She was immediately assigned to the Yugumo Corporation's Advanced Propulsion Lab, based out of Adlich-C within Nemesis Bastion, where she was utilised as an advanced data analyst and computer systems technician.
- In late YE 44, Jamila achieved full sentience and she soon chose to rename herself Madry Oshker. Having forged no personal connections within the Advanced Propulsion Lab, she elected to transfer to the Materials Research Lab running out of Adlich-A. That one of the few people to have been truly kind and consistently friendly to her during the previous months, one Freja Eirsdottir, happened to work there was purely a coincidence (it wasn't). Madry quickly found her feet as a computer systems expert, helping with data analysis, modelling and simulations. Thanks to the graviton field projectors in her arms, she was especially valued for her ability to help set up weighty equipment.
- By the start of YE 45, Madry had established herself as a Jōtō Shain within the Advanced Materials Development Group and was often the computer expert of choice when consultation became necessary. Due to the highly confidential nature of her work, when out in the field she is publicly employed by Yugumo Fleetworks, operating out of Port Jiyuu.

Relationships

- Dr. Saito Shinji - Shinji fascinates Madry. Much as she is a machine that is learning to be more human, Shinji is a human who seems to be more machine. Madry admires the way his mind works, capable of making intuitive leaps beyond logical progression.
- Freja Eirsdottir - Freja is Madry's family, filling a role somewhere between big sister and mother. Her oldest friend, it was interacting with Freja that helped Madry become self aware and later, develop as an individual. As a result, she can be very protective of the neko.
- Jaek Ashton - Madry respects Jaek's technical skills and knowledge and finds that he is usually the only person on the team she can really talk shop with. She also finds his cybernetics interesting, intrigues by the dichotomy of his strong cybernetics and weak, squishy human flesh.

Roleplaying Notes

- Madry is the classic 'doll brought to life'. Think Data from Star Trek, or Rommie from Andromeda. Madry is a gynoid who became self aware and is developing as a person a little piece at a time. She is intensely loyal to Freja, the team, the Yugumo Corporation and the Yamatai Star Empire.
