Weapon Mechanisms

- Firing Mechanism: When fired, the slide and barrel recoil a short distance before unlocking and separating. The barrel stops moving while the slide continues back, compressing the recoil spring and automatically performing the extraction and feeding process. The slide then continues forward, locking back into the barrel and pushing the barrel back into battery.
- Loading: A magazine is inserted into the receiver via an opening in the bottom of the hand grip and the slide is brought back to chamber a round.
- Firing Modes: Semi-auto only
- Safety Mechanism: The Corpsemaker does not have a safety system besides the half cock notch that renders the slide inoperable unless the hammer is pulled back into full cock or pulled into full cock and then manually lowered.
- Weapon Sight: The iron sights consist of a front blade and rear notch.
