Hex is rather well-known among hacker circles as a de facto leader of sorts. It seems to have a natural affinity for in-depth planning and large scale organization when working with other hackers, traits that are hard to come by in the Hacker Cult given its radically independent and decentralization doctrines. Perhaps the primary reason for his fame is his charismatic aura; he will not only get hackers to work together but make them believe in what they are doing, in some greater cause, which in turn inspires greater cooperativity and loyalty. When these traits are taken with its almost zealous belief in the freedom of information and equality, the result is what can only be described as a rebel leader without a war to fight.

Hex's position among the hacker community has made him a prime candidate for information gathering and diplomatic liaison duties, and such he is often chosen as a representative for such duties.
