History

Pre-RP

When Baps was just a young, carefree puggle enjoying life he noticed a peculiar phenomenon, a lot of the other smart puggles in his neighbourhood were disappearing, taken away by government representatives in dark clothes. Being just a young puggle, Baps couldn't really tell what was going on at the time, but he noticed that the ones taken away all had rather good grades. The shock moment happened when his own pouch brother was taken away, a big loss to take in for a young puggle. Rather than risk whatever was at the end of the line with the men in dark clothes he decided living a humble life would be better than flaunting his intellect.

He made sure his grades slowly dropped and his demeanour changed until he felt confident of his safety. Of course, he was regarded as a bit of an idiot child by the rest of the neighbourhood. But to Baps his choice of life sharpened his mind, people were so much more open to those they considered no threat. His family despaired at his low performance, especially his sister who was also nearly selected by the dark suits. The next few years he sort of cruised like this until his draft came in.

Baps's survival instinct kicked in again and he took a clerks position in Supply to stay away from anything dangerous, but when he started correctly accounting the balance sheets and exposing his superiors side deals he attracted enough ire to voluntarily shift into a combat position. He decided to hide himself in the ranks of the RRF, where the relative freedom and lack of scrutiny would help protect his cover.
