Background

The only child of a fledgling family, Beathag quickly showed the aptitude for engineering and construction that was common to members of the clan Gallve, mixed with a creative, introspective side. While not exactly a child genius, her family regarded the focused, introverted Beathag as their key to recognition and status, placing pressure to succeed upon the girl.

Whatever ambitions were had were driven to a halt when, towards the end of her studies, Beathag cracked under the stress and insulted the daughter of a rival family. When challenged by the other female's lover, Beathag fled, spending the remaining months of her education in shame; having failed both herself and her family's expectations.

Having finally finished her studies, Beathag ran away from home, claiming a variety of odd jobs during her flight to earn a living. At last, she set her sights upon a career in the Navy, hoping that flying away to the stars would help her escape her inner demons.

Service Record

Beathag has spent the majority of her service time aboard small, non-combat vessels, accumulating experience and recognition as a competent engineer. Though glory and status was never her goal in space, when the opportunity arose to stray into the unknown in a position aboard the HMS Harlaech Castle, she found herself tempted to pursue the position of head engineer.
