History and Relationship Notes

Freya was originally a resident of 188604 but her body had been found by a team of Psychopomp PMC soldiers performing their daily rounds in mapping the planet. Freya's body was found in critical condition by a pack of Osmanian drop bears some of which were already dead around the body. The team under instruction from the residing scientist took the body back to the ship in orbit where attempts were made to save the body. They were able to stabilize her but never bring her out of critical condition so an ST copy was made. This ST copy was then used as the personality for an experimental project code named "Copycat". Copycat was an Artificial Body that combined all of the company's knowledge in genetics and cybernetics to make a soldier who could link up to and control drones wirelessly. Previous attempts had failed and the subject's minds had broken but due to the strong will of Freya's own personality she pulled through though had no memory of her life before the project. Since then she has been apart of many operations and has become more cold over the years as she is mostly sent on jeopardized missions usually resulting in her arriving after several members have been wounded or killed.
