Pre-RP

Vathr'dal grew up as the youngest child of an engineer and a senator. He had two older siblings, both of whom cherished him. He was placed into a rigorous tutoring program at a young age, where he showed special aptitude for engineering and inventing. He also began to act as a confidant for his brother and sister, listening to their stories and offering advice. His parents saw that he had adopted the best of their traits, and decided to step up his studying.

When Vathr'dal was 30, his father took him to see engineers designing spacecraft. He immediately became fascinated with the idea of flight, and began learning all he could about it. When the Occhestian's split from the Matriarchy, his family stayed loyal, and Vathr'dal decided that the best way to show his loyalty was to join the LSDF. He chose to become a pilot, and became very proficient with the Hawk Fighter Bomber.

After completing his training, Vathr'dal was assigned to an LSDF cruiser as a pilot. His job was to shuttle the away teams to their objectives and back again. He enjoyed his time on the ship, but found difficulties with the crew. After a game of cards, Horizon's drunken wingman accused him of cheating, because the wingman could not rationalize that he had just been dealt a few poor hands. The wingman then proceeded to pull a knife on Vathr'dal, and the New Tur'lista made the poor choice of shooting his wingman. After a court marshal that he won through claiming self defense, The Matriarchy decided to push this mess under the rug. He was re-assigned to the LSDF Akahar, where he would serve the same function as before, but on this smaller scavenger ship. He has made the best of it, however, and looks forward to his time on the Akahar.

Skills

Communication

A part of Vathr'dal's education was languages. He has a mastery of the Lorath language, he is fluent in Yamataian and Neplesian, and can understand some Abwheran. Vathr'dal can also operate communication systems that use these languages. He also knows some basic cryptography.

Humanities

His mother personally taught him the arts of diplomacy, sociology, psychology, and philosophy. He is capable of well-educated debate and persuasion. He also has a large amount of insight, so he has an easier time telling if people are lying to him. His open and friendly nature allows him to counsel people who are in need of it.

Knowledge

Vathr'dal's parents taught him extensively about history, law, and technology. He is very familiar with these areas as they pertain to Lorath, especially in the area of technology. He can recall facts about these subjects easily, and is always looking for new information to learn.

Technology Operations

Vathr'dal has had a knack for technology from a young age. He is able to operate most of the technology of Lorath, especially spacecraft, and is familiar enough with the general workings of machinery to be able to understand new tech when given enough time to study it.

Engineering

Vathr'dal's father taught him much about engineering. He is a very capable engineer, and he was even able to design his own cybernetic hands(although he had to get them surgically installed by a doctor). He can easily design simple electronics and machines, and is capable of creating more complex devices given enough time and resources.

Vehicles

Vathr'dal is a very good pilot, and is capable of driving any small spacecraft in the LSDF arsenal. He is particularly proficient with the Hawk fighter bomber, and has spent many hours training with that vehicle. He can also operate LSDF mecha and land vehicles to a degree.

Maintenance and Repair

Because of his affiliation with LSDF vehicles, Vathr'dal can fix most general problems on them with the proper resources and money. He is also able to repair and maintain electronic systems because of his ability with technology operation, and he can repair basic problems on the ship's structure and systems.
