Build and Skin Color: Like all Fyunnen, Seeker is well built, the result of not only his caste, but thousands of hours of combat training and exercise. As is common with many of the recent generations, his skin, while pale, is slightly more tan than is usual for his race.

Eyes and Facial Features: Seeker is fairly handsome (and he knows it), sharing the heart shaped face of his people. He bears a small scar on his right cheek. His eyes are a particularly livid shade of violet. vivid Ears: Seeker has fairly average ears, pointed at the top and being about two inches higher than a normal human's. He is missing a small portion of the left lobe, a result of a training accident.

Hair Color and Style: Hair is fairly short, and artificially dyed crimson red.

Distinguishing Features:

Psychological Characteristics

Personality: Seeker is, like most of his caste, a fairly aggressive if not particularly violent individual. He has a tendency to be direct and to the point, almost as if everything were a military situation, even when they aren't. Driven by a motivation to excel, he will grab at almost any chance to make his name.

- Likes: Mechs, mechanical tinkering, reading, females, being a pilot
- Dislikes: Idiots, people who regard him as a dumb grunt, cheese
- Goals: Seeker has simple goals, merely wishing to be the best at what he does, to be recognized as one of the elite.

History

Family

Father, deceased.

Mother, serving technician, Ayana-Class Escort.

Sister, still in school.

Pre-RP

Born on Lor, Sen'ythy spent a large amount of time in the care of relatives, as his mother was frequently deployed, and his father had been killed in combat before he was born. Sponsored by his aunt, a wealthy widower, he attended the Lorath college of war sciences, reviving training to become a mech pilot. During his time there, among other students who were all trying their best, he realized that the prestige associated with becoming the best, of being held up as an example to follow, inspired him greatly.

Sen'ythy was assigned to the LSDF Akahar for his first deployment. Initially shortlisted to be assigned to a more prestigious unit, his advancement hit a setback when, during the graduation ceremony, a servo malfunction in his suit caused Seeker to accidentally step on the commandant's pet. More bitter about this than he would let on, he reported for duty aboard the Akahar.

Skills

Communication

Seeker has learned both the Lorath language as well as Nepleslian Trade. He can speak and write both fluently, though given his ancestry he is better with Lorath than with Trade.

Fighting

Seeker has been given the basic training that all military recruits obtain, and is competent with small arms as well as hand-to-hand combat. He excelled in training where mech-based combat was concerned, however.

Maintenance and Repair

Rated as a junior mechanic, Seeker enjoys tinkering and fixing objects when he can. Occasionally he can be found in the hangar bay, working on some small part of whatever he is assigned, a fact that has gotten him in trouble for unauthorized modifications more than once.

Domestics

As is expected of Fyunnen, Seeker has been trained in the skills needed to effectively maintain his quarters, making his own food, and maintaining a clean and organized environment conducive to military life.

Survival and Military

Seeker has been given the skills necessary to survive and thrive in a military environment, as well as more specialized escape and evasion training, as well as being taught how to survive in a number of different climates and ecosystems.

Vehicles

Given specialized training as a Mech pilot, Seeker is a skilled operator, feeling almost as at home in the cockpit as out of it. While not technically one of the elite, he prides himself on being very, very, good. In addition, he is rated to operate many of the standard vehicles of the Lorath Self Defence Force from wheeled utility transports to light shuttles.

Rogue

Seeker thinks of himself as something of a ladie's man, a fact reinforced by his time at the war college, where he was seldom without a date on leave days. He also learned from a mechanical instructor various card games played by soldiers, as well as sleight of hand tricks.
