Physical Description

Syn'aziel has a muscular slender frame with a smaller waist and as a younger Lorath he has the tanned skin common among his generation. He is in possession of almost feral facial features, a straight length nose and the most vibrant red eyes amongst his family who are very commonly known for their nearly glowing eyes. Syn'aziel's secret lies in one of the many cybernetics added to his body, his eyes that are modified to allow him a digital HUD overlay over the world around him give off a faint glow and are always scrolling with the information mirrored on the lenses in front of his retinas. His long face and sharp chin add to his keen appearance, overall it's easy to see the noble attributes just in his subtle expressions alone.

The youth has traditionally white head of hair with red cybernetic extensions underlaying his natural hair implanted deep into his skull, the cybernetic strands allow Syn'aziel to collect simple atmospheric data around himself. The style is done parted down the center with bangs that stylishly hang just over his forehead with sections at either side that run down to fade into points just under his chin. The teased hair in the back that makes up the body of his hair is always kept back with a small bit of product, the style in the back is similar to fashionable visual-kei rock bands with the layers feathered to curl outwards.

Syn'aziel is far from plain else wise. The top tip of his New Tur'Listan ear is encased in another cybernetic addition and the internal tragus to both his ears had been implanted with small sound enhancing additions which also assists Syn'aziel with sound communications and recording capabilities. Just below his left eye is a metal encasing embedded into his skull, it's an access port to his highly advanced cybereyes.

Psychological Characteristics

Outwardly Syn'aziel is ever deserving of his namesake, he is a very zelious, proud, ambitious and headstrong Lorath youth. Though he is full of young ignorance, Syn'aziel isn't to be taken lightly in worldly affairs, he is a vicious fighter and attributed with quite a impressive knack for technology like most of his house. It's obvious to see he has pride in his New Tur'Listan birth, and because of his quick nature of being one of the first to volunteer for the more difficult missions it's also obvious to see he is eager to prove him self. Born in a traditional family of lesser nobility, Syn'aziel carries many of those conservative views common to older Lorath and holds himself with utmost dignity and believes in old world honor. A few more subtle and hidden things about the youth is his prejudice against Fyunnan house, mostly on the grounds that he believes that house New Tur'Lista has the same capability to produce strong soldiers if not better because of their innate intellect.

Quotes

Biography

History

Syn'aziel was the second of two sons to his parents; he lived a very strict cultivated life of a Lorath child of low noble birth. He spent his earliest years growing up to follow in his older brother's footsteps. All of his decisions and choices reflected that of his older brother as he basically grew up in his shadow. In his early youth, Syn'aziel didn't think anything wrong of such a path. His older brother; Syn'aeius known mainly by his off world name of Ardent was just as worthy to his name sake as Zeal. Born ahead by four years and six months, he created a long hard path for a Lorath of his house, but never the less their parents were proud and Syn'aziel was ever ready to rise up close behind.

But then the turning point in the Occhestan house became the turning point in Zeal's life as well. His brother left under the guise of night with the traitors to their house, it is said that Ardent became a well respected decorated soldier for the Occhestans, but any additional information or his reasons for leaving were left unknown to Zeal. His parents of noble standing and deep roots in the house kept their position in the new banner of New Tur'Lista and as a family of strong traditional virtue; they quickly disowned their son Syn'aeius, making Syn'aziel the oldest son, by tradition and law.

So resenting his brother for his actions and the disgrace he had put his family though, Zeal quickly took up his new position, symbolized by extending his hair to that of the eldest son, and aimed for perfection at outdoing anything his brother held in high regard. This meant that Zeal quickly became obsessed with being a better combatant, greater engineer and most importantly; a better power armor pilot then his brother's legend. This lead Zeal to his addiction to new cybernetics, each new part made his small personal advancements make leaps and bounds to outgrowing his brother's shadow. This however did not stop him from his studies or regular training. Not one for social distractions or anything but his life quest, Syn'aziel spend most, if not all of his time working on the progression of his skills and combat worth.

Then the day came, he was allowed to join the Lorath Self Defence Force. So with his parent's blessings and his pride, Syn'aziel set off for training. From there, he went straight into service as a pilot on the LSDF planetary defence squad, and then served for a year before he caught word of the chance for a glorious station on an important ship. With haste, he was one of the first to sign up.
