Personality

Books have always been a great escape to other worlds for David, especially since growing up his family didn't have the money for a whole lot of extra money for different entertainment options. His interest in stories, particularly those of heroes of both fantasy settings and in times of war in the real world, grew exponentially once his father was arrested.

With age, his passion for becoming the single best officer on the force and for making a name for himself that will finally remove the dark blot brought on his family name by his father combined with his need for an escape. With reading taking a backseat to his training, it became replaced with trips to the gym as David pushed to stand out from the rest of the other cadets.

Due to the experience of being in a terrible crash during a high-speed pursuit, David incredibly dislikes driving. While not wholly adverse to it since he does have a job to do, he instead prefers to have someone else do the driving for him.

History

Pre-RP

David was born in the YE 18 and lived with his two parents in Funky City. His father Joseph worked the streets as a beat cop to support his family while his mother stayed at home to care for and homeschool David. He didn't have very much money growing up but the first half dozen years of his life were full of love and happiness. The Hawke family's overall situation even began to improve when David's father got recognized for his hard work and received a pay raise.

Unfortunately, this upward trend came to an abrupt halt when his father's raise turned out to be money he'd been taking from local street thugs to turn a blind eye to some of their shady dealings. Soon after Joseph was incarcerated and David's mother Veronica became forced to work a low wage job to provide for them. All of a sudden being forced to go to a public school David was frightened by the new experiences but forced himself to make as many friends as possible to distract himself from how he felt at the sudden fragmentation of his family.

Shortly finishing school, David felt almost obligated to join the National Police Force of Nepleslia to write the wrongdoings of his father and make his mother proud of him. He studied and trained as hard as he could and graduated in the top tenth of his class at the academy. For the next five years, he dedicated his life to the force, always on call ready to help.

All his hard work and dedication paid off when he was selected to be a part of one of the new Designated Tactical Response Teams and began the rigorous training required to become part of such an elite group. He showed incredible proficiency when it came to medicine and at the end of training became a full-blown field medic before being sent off to join the team in Roger Wilco City.
