His work ethic, forged through years of manual labor, is complemented by a strategic and problem-solving approach, making him a valuable asset in both professional and personal endeavors.

History

Eric Baine's roots are firmly embedded in a blue-collar upbringing, as he was raised as the son of a hardworking construction worker in Roger Wilco City. From an early age, he was immersed in the world of grit and labor, learning the ropes of the construction trade from his father. The echoes of hammers, the scent of ozone from cutting torches, and the rhythm of heavy machinery became the backdrop of his childhood, shaping him into the resilient and industrious individual he would become.

Nearing adulthood, Eric naturally gravitated towards a career in construction, following in his father's footsteps. For years, he honed his skills on various construction sites, mastering the art of building and creating with his own hands. However, at the age of 20, a pivotal moment led Eric to take a different path. Fueled by a sense of duty and a desire for new challenges as the sector faced many dangers, he made the life-altering decision to join the Marines.
