Physical Description

Tall and lithe, if thin, her body was built as simple and standard issue. At six foot dead even and just over 130 lbs, she is tall and thin, with copper penny red hair kept in a loose bun, often with stray hairs. Large, dark brown eyes often show curiosity, though her narrow, gaunt face can seem rather severe, at times. Average nose and lips, and a mirror white pale skin tone.

She can often be found wearing a modest tee shirt and whatever pants will fit.

Personality

Bouncy, bubbly, ditz, with a penchant for forgetting to label equipment, she gets bored easily, and tends towards being an aggressive flirt, if showing little or no actual sexual interest in most people.

Doesn't like smokers, racial stigmas about her being a neko, or sleep.

Likes caffeine, helping people, and anyone who treats her with some modicum of respect.

Loves Neppie's Stim burgers.

Bad things happen when she gets bored.

History

Born on a battlecruiser just before the beginning of the Mishhu War, she was quickly assigned to assisting recovered POWs recover from their ordeal, assisting with battlefield injuries, and occasionally putting a soldier too wounded temporarily out of their misery.

After her discharge and the end of the war, Dryad found herself working as a civilian nurse on various space station medical clinics, eventually finding herself boredly working on Uso's "188604" Saber installation.

Naturally, she would happily sign on with the first ship that came into port without a medic on board, if only to get away from a mundane job.

Unfortunately, her own traumas built up where she wouldn't seek help, and she spaced herself in early YE:40. Due to the nature of her suicide and subsequent note, it was advised to not restore her via ST, as the risk was too high of her just killing herself again.
