Psychological Characteristics

Personality: Cintanisa is calm and cool but can be quite harsh and cruel at times. With the loss of his family, and a near death experience, he has very little fear of those around him and tends to look at danger as just another challenge in his life.

Cintanisa is calm due to his upbringing and family having taught him to always be patient and to never rush things, while his occasional harshness and cruelty is the result of him fighting in the wars and having to always retreat and never really gaining much ground, both of which are personality quirks that occasionally conflict with one another but that he is able to keep in check as long as he is placed under too much pressure.

One of the things about his personality is that when a challenge presents itself, he jumps to it and takes it without question. Always trying to test himself and always trying to push himself to the absolute breaking point.

Pre-RP

Cintanisa was born before Yamatai existed, but had served his early years with his family on Elysia learning about his culture and his people. After the war with Yamatai, and the subsequent loss, he began to resent the people and who they were. During the last big war with Yamatai he fought in the resistance, but his desire to fight and his morale was constantly being hammered with loss after loss until finally he lost most of his family.

This loss tempered him, he wasn't angry, nor was he vengeful, he knew that in war people would die and that blaming the other side for those deaths wouldn't bring back those who were lost. It was a stance that many didn't agree with him on, regardless however, when Yamatai and Elysia became allies he decided to join up - to see what it was like on the other side, though he kept his dislike for Yamatai buried deep in the back of his mind so that it wouldn't interfere with his job.

He stayed mostly in the logistical area of the army before hearing about a ship he could potentially serve on.
