Personality

Shiro is fairly quiet and shy, tending to not talk to many people, and to keep his head down. His motivation is to simply be braver and be more like a soldier. His goals in life are...Actually the exact same as his motivation. He wishes to be braver and soldier-like.

Fairly hard working, he does what he must to reach his goals. His habits tend to be out of nervousness, often times biting his nails or bouncing up and down on the balls of his feet. He very rarely gets angry, and tends to keep quiet if he is...Unless you make him mad enough. He's fairly cautious, making sure to check over any dangers before he does anything. He tends to consider himself more feminine than manly.

Most of his relationships with people are nothing serious, except his relationship with his mom, who he gets along with very well. It gets him more towards being feminine. Not really, he tends to keep very quiet among people, only speaking to those that talk to him. He loves his parents, and tends to like people that don't make him talk too much, or are at least fairly friendly. He's sadly never been in a relationship, but this also means he's single and open. He treats them fairly well, often times cooking for anyone coming over, as he finds it proper. He's usually quiet though, so he lacks a lot of friends.

- Likes: The Star Army, his friends and family, historical stuff, sweeter foods
- Dislikes: Enemies of the Star Army, overly talkative people, math

History

Hayakawa Shiro was born in YE 19 in the city of Geshrinopolis to a fairly wealthy family. At the age of 5, he and his family had to flee, due to the Elysian Navy destroying it during the Fourth Elysian War. During this time, his family was fairly depressed, and thus he never felt too great. Soon after he was moved to Kyoto, the new capital, and began life normally once more for him, he became more and more interested in the Star Army, and the many people who were apart of it. At the age of 12, he had invested a lot of his time into studying the Star Army, and realized he had wanted to be a soldier. At the age of 13, he began to dress more gender neutral, but primarily a bit more feminine, wearing skirts and things similar. He also began going out to shooting ranges every week or two ,so he could fire guns, so he could become even more like the people he saw in the Star army. He looked up to them like they were idols in a way. He also took up hobbies such as cooking, volleyball, and dancing.

As he got more into high school, Shiro managed to pick up a few friends, a fairly tall and somewhat intimidating boy, Gaku, and a smaller girl who he very much liked a lot, Asuka. He grew very close to the two, almost considering them family. During this, he has further increased in his cooking and even some of his social skills, although not much, it was still something. While in high school, he joined the volleyball team, the track team, and the dance team. Despite his small frame, he became a star athlete in all three sports.

Once Shiro got out of high school, he decided to read up more on the Star Army, just until he believed he knew all he needed to join. As soon as he reached the age, he joined up to be a part of infantry, as he believed that would get him closer to the idols he so much adored. He also joined up, to gain a bit more courage, and to hopefully become less of a coward.

He went through basic training, and has now been assigned to YSS Kaiyo II.
