Character Description

Fusako is a woman in control in several different contexts, in each of which she behaves differently. When performing business, she likes to play the welcoming host and only discusses the details of a transaction once her guests have been made comfortable. When making sake, she has a single-minded focus on precision which she strictly enforces in her employees. In this context, she will not hesitate to embarrass someone if it means saving a batch of her product. However, whenever possible she prefers to let her employees save face. At the end of every workday, she shows her gratitude to her employees without hesitation and makes sure they never go home sober or unhappy. Finally, she is rarely found outside of a work context, but when she is she is usually alone and quietly enjoying tea along with something to read.

History & Relationships

Not much is known about Fusako before she created Ice Queen Sake. It is known that she was married to a man named Kinoshita Ryuki who passed away.

After the Great Plague of YE 08, Fusako took ownership of a building at the base of the Ice Queen Mountains. This building's location, next to a mountain stream and abutting fertile plains to the south, made it the ideal location at which to make sake. In fact, the building had been used for some time to make sake, but any official records predating the plague have been lost. Fusako worked alone for some years before releasing her first batch of sake, and before long her business was profitable enough to hire employees to help. Even after hiring help, Fusako insists on performing all of the menial tasks associated with sake making alongside her employees, in addition to running the business and overseeing the process.

Having made sake for 35 years now, she has undertaken several apprentices. However, since she has shown little sign that she might retire or even slow down, her apprentices typically move on to open their own sake-making businesses. Since she took her first batch of employees, she hasn't changed her process. Though she has made experimental small batches, but always in addition to her traditional offerings.

In YE 44, Fusako publicly announced her plans to run for Imperial Premier in YE 45, but shortly before the end of the year she canceled her plans and volunteered for the Star Army instead.
