History

Family (or Creators)

Yikateme Luara - 38 - Alive Yikateme Joyaten - 35 - Dead

Pre-RP

Sakura was born on Yamatai in YE 19, her mother was a soldier fighting for the Empire while her father often times stayed home or worked odd jobs. It was due to this atmosphere that Sakura gradually grew independant, as her father wasn't always around and her mother couldn't be there when she needed her the most. While her childhood wasn't sad, it wasn't perfect either.

She loved to explore areas of Kyoto, though her cautious nature made it to where she never went to places where she could get into serious trouble, as she didn't want her mother to get mad and scold her. However, this often times didn't stop her from just going around the city after school ended and just looking around and enjoying the views. While she was a school kid, she meet another student by the name of Stewart, Raquel, a person she came to admire and follow, but also to protect after she heard about what happened to Raquel's family.

Despite her nature, how cautious she was and how much she tried to avoid danger, it didn't serve her at all when in YE 33 the Battle of Yamatai happened. Her mother was off fighting and her father was away, having only recently joined the police force. She was home alone and ignored evacuation orders due to wanting to save some of her families mementos, as she was about to leave her home something crashed into it, burying her under the home.

When she woke up, she found she was under the house covered in debris, she could faintly hear the sounds of weapons fire both near and far. She couldn't scream, however, as when she tried her voice never left her mouth. Instead, she used a pipe she could and began beating it against a metal plate. It took awhile before the sound brought someone to her, a group of soldiers who had been in the area.

It took several minutes before she was pulled from the house, but her body had been wrecked. Both of her legs were crushed and her left arm was in equally bad shape but the worst part was that she was slowly slipping away.

At the hospital she was transferred into the new NH-31 Minkan, but she was left to sleep for awhile longer. When she woke up, she realized the new differences in her body. However, her ordeal hadn't really ended, she learned through some friends that her father hadn't survived the battle and was killed while fighting NMX.

This spurred her emotions, increasing her hatred of the NMX further than it had already. Although she wanted to avenge her father, she knew her pacifistic nature made it impossible for her to truly take a life, so instead she decided to do something different. Instead of joining the military, like her father had desired her to do, she joined the SSS.
