Her care does not only extend to the living, but to anything that is placed in her care as well. From uniform to Power armor, she will take care of it with the utmost care. No matter what she has to do, she will do her given task with a smile, even if only to indicate to others that it isn't that bad. Her file notes to prevent this at all cost in order to prevent her from severely harming herself.

History

Family (or Creators)

Ketsurui Zaibatsu

Pre-RP

During her initial training, she watched how the instructors took care of her and others like her, and started to copy that behavior. Taking care of new born even with the limited knowledge that she had. This behavior even extended to the Training Power Armor entrusted to her. As she watched the mechanics work on it, she started to copy the behavior. During the second week of combat training during an exercise to teach coping with the stress of battle a simulated death of one of her team drove Yuzuhara mad with rage. It took the force of several instructors to detain her. After examination the doctors were surprised to find that she had managed to tear several muscles. Scans had found that her fit of rage had caused her to disable the hard-coded tolerances set in her digital brain. Additional training on mechanics and engineering was scheduled for her, to allow the doctors to further observe her. The event was noted in her personnel file upon graduation.
