

LSDF Minor Computer Access

Designed to be used as an access point for some intensive but mostly non-intensive computer control, the minor computer access room is something more kin to a small office. These rooms allow users to use the single workstation present to work with a ship or installation computer, and the network it is connected to. User access is limited to minor systems and non-classified data by default, unless proper authorization codes, biometric scans, and an activation key are used to disable hardware and software lockouts on the system.
