

Neshaten Division of Education

The Division of Education is a department within the Kingdom's government that is responsible for overseeing the Educational needs of the citizens. It is overseen by eight private citizens and a lord, that lord is currently J'vaste Ne'ushae and the division headquarters is found in Ne'ushae.

The division is separate from the rest of the government to ensure that proper education is pursued by citizens and that there are little to no restrictions in what a citizen can learn, this was done so that in the event of a tyrannical monarchy, that monarchy can't easily 'stop' a citizen from being educated.

While all schools are public, they are all privately funded.

History

Unlike other divisions, the Division of Education actually has a history starting from back during the days of the Federation. Back then, the Depart of Education - as it was known - was fully under the control of the Federation and its government, this caused a number of issues to arise both before and during the Great War; these issues included the restriction of educational material that the department deemed troublesome or dangerous for students to learn, while at the same time propagating propaganda material to keep citizens loyal while also hiding the Federation's own problems, at the same time the department would also rewrite historical events to cast either themselves in a better light or to cast their enemies in a worse light.

This was a point of contention for many students and their families, and is a reason why the Department of Education fell out of favour as the Great War progressed onward and was eventually abolished a short while before the Great Exodus, in doing so Federation citizens were able to learn just how ruthless their enemy was and just how much their own government was trying to hide from them.

It was for this reason, amongst others, why when the Kingdom of Neshaten was established; the first ever monarchy chose to make the Division of Education a separate entity, whose people reported only to the citizens and not to the monarchy. The Division was originally in the Capital city, but after the establishment of Ne'ushae City it was moved there and later on the city created a new kind of curriculum that was tested in the city and later adopted by the Kingdom.

She'sha Curriculum

The She'sha Curriculum is a set of goals and guidelines that schools and teachers are taught and advised to follow, they were tested and found to be effective.

- Teaching about the differences between Shukaren and My'leke, prepares students for co-ed classes after preparatory school (Pre-school) and continues onward even into elementary school.
- Reading and Writing, ensures that students know how to properly read and write at their grade level.

- Arithmetic, ensures that students know their mathematics for their assigned grade level.
- Military and safety drills, students are taught how to protect themselves in the event of an invasion of their world or an attack on their city, or even just how to protect themselves if they are attacked while walking home.
- History and Laws, students are taught their countries history - from the very beginning, to the present, along with the laws.
- Students are taught to help one another out, as classes graduate together and not on an individual student bases, thus the students are instructed in how to help one another out.
- Work Ethics and preparations, students are taught what it is they need to know to survive in the work place, what is expected of them, and what safety precautions they should take.

She'ha Curriculum

This type of Curriculum is slightly different and designed to help students with educational problems, such as slow learning or mental or emotional issues that make learning at their grade level more difficult than a student who doesn't have these problems. These students are not segregated and are not placed in separate classes, instead teachers encourage a problem students classmates to assist, while providing that student with additional help both before and after school.

She'ha is not restricted to just problem students, any student can undertake these curriculum either to help themselves or to help others.

Education Levels

There are three different levels of education, with only one being compulsory.

Sh'ishen

This level of education is compulsory and starts when the Kid is age five, although can also start a bit later or even earlier. Students are taught everything from basic to advanced arithmetic, language, social studies, history and science. At the same time, they also get involved in physical education, home economics, music, career technical training, military preparedness training.

Sh'ishen is comprised of grades one through seven.

Ui'ishen

Ui'ishen is practically the same as Sh'ishen, except that in some schools its used to denote a halfway point between lower and higher education.

I'oshen

This level of education is optional and starts when the Kit is twelve years of age, this education is comprised of grades eight through twelve. These students learn much higher forms of education than their Sh'ishen counterparts.

Jui'ashen Level

Jui'ashen refers to a student who is a student at a technical or higher education based schools, Jui'ashen are students learning advanced forms of education.

Special Electives

Electives are classes designed by the Division of Education to provide students with activities that they can perform, some of these electives are considered sports, such as archery and tend to lead to large scale planet and even Kingdom wide tournaments.

Other electives are not sports, but are actually classes that help students out in other fields. Some of which includes the working field, where students can gain invaluable experiences which will help them after they've graduated.

One elective, which is present in all schools and is actually considered a sport, is known as a Wartime Preparedness Elective.

Wartime Preparedness

A special elective found in most schools, this particular elective takes military training and safety to an entirely new level by allowing students access to actual military equipment and teaching those students how to properly use that equipment. Students can also get involved in flag exercises run by the Navy, whether they be ground, air, or even space based. This elective is commonly attended by students in the Youth Corps.

This type of elective also pits school against one another in a tournament style like game¹⁾, which helps to teach the students more about how to properly handle their equipment while also teaching them valuable teamwork and leadership skills.

While deemed important, the elective is rather restrictive in that it won't permit students who have a criminal record from joining. Wavers can be signed by the courts, but the student would be under a lot of supervision. This elective is known as Aa'sha'fame.
