Light Defense Platforms

Light Defense Platforms, or LDP's are stations that have the lightest number of turrets and are typically the most common and usually are fitted with short to medium ranged weapons.

Medium Defense Platforms

Medium defense platforms are a cross between the light and heavy platforms, they have weapons than a light but less than a heavy, they are the second most common - and usually contain long-range weapons.

Heavy Defense Platforms

Heavy Defense Platforms are the behemoths that protect planets and very important locations, they are very large defense installations and typically fitted with a single spinal cannon and numerous light, medium, heavy, and assault turrets. They are the least common, with a planet usually having only four or five, but these particular platforms require power transfer systems and a ground based power plant.
