The YSS Battle Of Ayenee Capital City is named after Operation Bloody Shield, which occurred during the Chaos Hive War in YE 21.

History and Background

The YSS Battle Of Ayenee Capital City was laid down at Gemini Star Fortress in YE 41, constructed under the orders of Taisho Kessaku Irim of the First Fleet. Its original IRN was, NF-S1-12. It was among the First Fleet ships that was involved in the Battle Of Glimmergold in YE 43, under the command of Tasia Sakurai Arata. The ship was badly damaged during the battle and was stationed at Ketsurui Star Fortress undergoing repairs for most of the remainder of YE 43.

In YE 44, following the Re-Establishment Of The Fifth Expeditionary Fleet, the ship was transferred to the Fifth Expeditionary Fleet under the command of Taisho Ketsurui-Motoyoshi Katsuko. Upon arrival at Gemini Star Fortress it was sent for updates and improvements in preparation for its role as the new flagship of the fleet.

Modifications and Improvements

Upon transfer to the Fifth Expeditionary Fleet in YE 44, the YSS Battle Of Ayenee Capital City was immediately sent to Gemini Star Fortress for the following improvements:

- Palace-Style Passageways Black carpeting, Jiyuuan Maple for woodwork, art, and tapestries to be transferred from Motoyoshi-jo and Jiyuu Jo.
- Updated to the Nodal Liquid Conduit System, a system which replaces the former Hemosynthetic Conduit System and Nodal System and ties together systems such as the Hemosynthetic Reconstruction Tube, Fabrication and Repair Systems and Star Army Standard Life Support Systems
- Addition of an aquarium ³⁾
- Ketsurui-Motoyoshi Katsuko's private chef from Takeda House, who will be vetted and brought on board, will update custom galley plans and wardroom specifications. Wardroom Art featuring paintings of Seijin no Umi will be transferred from Jiyuu Jo.
- Torpedo Compliment - In addition to regular armament inventory, please include Ke-Z3 Series Ransā Anti-Capital/Super-Capital Torpedo.
- YSS Tokyo-style YSS Tokyo Command Offices and Katsuko's YSS Tokyo Suite.

Tokyo Style Shipyard Modification

Mounted on the bottom ninety decks of the ship is a 540-meter tall construct that serves as a shipyard. It is open to space, essentially being two horizontal six-kilometer-long rails with vertical ribs held a bit over a kilometer apart. This structure is covered in mounting hardware and a Scalable Graviton Beam Projector Array from which to construct a vessel. These rails and ribs are also designed with Integrated CFS Array panels under their hull not only to further protect a vessel under construction in the shipyard in combat but also to shield the ship itself should the vessel in the shipyard catastrophically fail or be a source of an attack. With this latter functionality, the shipyard can be used to hold captured and potentially hostile vessels.

Though the shipyard itself is of these limited dimensions, there is a bit of a recess at the bottom of the ship above the shipyard that runs the entire length of the vessel. As such, there is no true limitation to the length of the vessel that can be docked, and the fact there is open space under the shipyard means that dimension is also unlimited. The only hard limit is the one-kilometer width of the ribs. Practicality for structural integrity and shielding purposes, however, recommends that the largest vessel that the Tokyo construct to be 10km x 1km x 1km.
